Leather working

Leather working:

Working with leather can be very satisfying and you can produce things that could be passed down to other generations. Leather, if taken care of, can last a long time. There are companies out there, like Tandy Leather, that sell leather kits to make things like wallets, knife sheaths, belts, coasters and bookmarks.

Each project requires the same basic steps to complete the project. We are going to start out with building the Small Knife Pouch, using a basket weave stamp on the leather. The project will take about 4 ½ hours of time to complete for the boys. You will need a very sturdy table or a concrete floor to do the leather stamping. You will also need drop clothes to protect any table, chairs and or the floor from the stain and sealer.

You will need to go to a Tandy Leather store or on the internet at:
